

Gender Sensitive Urban Design Guidelines & Implementation Toolkit

Literature Review Summary

Use this code to read the full report

The Gender Sensitive Urban Design Guideline conducted a desktop study which reviewed over 55 reports, publications, articles, policies and guidelines from local, national and international (Vienna, Madrid and the United Kingdom) sources

Women, girls, and sexual and gender diverse people make up over 50% of the world's population

- Safety in public space is linked to full and equal participation in our community

An inter-sectional, gender-specific and place-specific approach

- Design is not gender neutral
- Move beyond the universalising of men
- Draw on the lived experience of diverse and marginalised communities

Meaningful and enduring change

- Gender sensitive regulatory change in the ACT
- Structural and cultural change in governance and design
- Across scales and places

ACT
Government

Gender Sensitive
Urban Design

